Glucose Test Strip Donation Agreement

I understand that I am donating my excess blood glucose testing strips to the company Less Gets More, that currently operates the website <http://www.diabetic-donations.com>.

I am certain that I will not be needing these test strips back in the near future. They will become the property of Less Gets More, who will then go through a special process to redistribute them to diabetics that need them. They will not be returned to the donor for any reason.

I certify that the boxes of glucose test strips that I send are unopened and unused. No reimbursement whatsoever will be given for boxes that are opened. I also certify that all boxes sent are well within their expiration date (preferably at least 3 months until expiration.) This will insure that I am fully reimbursed. Strips that are much closer to the expiration will have a smaller reimbursement value. Strips that are expired will receive no reimbursement.

I have read the shipping instructions on the Diabetic Donations website (<http://www.diabetic-donations.com/how-to-ship>) and understand that the strips are best mailed in a sturdy box to protect them from crushing or damage. There will be smaller (or no) reimbursement for crushed or damaged strips.

I have reviewed the brands of test strips that Less Gets More currently accepts for reimbursement (<http://www.diabetic-donations.com/brands-accepted>) and I have seen the reimbursement amounts . At this time other brands are not reimbursed, but still may be donated.

I am indicating my preference below by checking the appropriate line.
